out the complete change of front on M. Caillaux's part. The effect on the bourse was remarkable, the rente at once jumping from f.88.15 to f.88.92.

There was some extraordinarily plain speaking in the press, one journal declaring that maneuvers of this sort were not finance, but required another name, since opportunity was given to anybody who knew how to make extraordinary

The attacks drew from M. Caillaux a semi-official note stating that the text of his new proposals had been misunderstood and that he still intended to tax rente and would make a statement in the Chamber on the subject. As soon as this was known the rente fell on the bourse to f.88.42.

Jaures pointing out that from the bourse fluctuations it was obvious that M. Caillaux's proposals had been read by the brokers in the same sense as they had been understood by the public.

He was followed by M. Barthou, who pointed out that M. Caillaux had told the Chamber that if the rente was exempt the income tax was an impossibility, and finally wound up with the demand that M. Caillaux should explain why the rente government bill.

there had never been any question of a change of attitude and that the reason why the rente had not been included in the text of the bili was purely technical, and he appealed to the majority to continue their support of the government.

On this, M. Jaures again returned to escape of the rente from taxation.

SCULPTOR AT WORK

(Special to the Monitor)

EDINBURGH, Scotland-To commem orate the fourth centenary of the victory of its townspeople in a border skirmish in the sixteenth century, the people of Hawick have resolved to erect a suitable memorial in the town, and have chosen William F. Beattie, an Edinburgh sculptor, himself a native of Hawick, to execute an equestrian statue, 21 feet 6 inches in height.

Four hundred years ago the "callants" of Hawick, a border town in Scotland sallied over on a skirmish against a band of English marauders who had encamped at Hornshole on the Teviot, surprised and routed them, captured the leader's pennant, and bore it back in triumph to the

STATE CONTROL OF SCHOOLS IS TOLD

Vice-Chancellor of Leeds University Says He Believes It Is Unnecessary for All to Be Licensed

(Special to the Monitor) LONDON — In addressing a meeting convened by the College of Preceptors, Michael Sadler, vice-chancellor of Leeds University, said he felt it to be unnecessary in Great Britain in existing circumstances to requre by law that every school should hold a license from the civil authority.

Reasons for establishing state supervision of all schools were, first, a desire to raise the intellectual standard of the teaching; and, secondly, a desire to protect the established government from the dangers arising from nurseries of political opinion hostile to the principles upon which the structure of the government of the country was based.

So far as he was able to judge, more was to be gained in political stability in England from freedom than from restriction. In his judgment, they in England were not in a position to determine with confidence such as characterized German statesmen 100 or 120 years ago to what circles of studies students should be required to advance at each stage of their education. CALCUTTA. India - The Calcutta Trades Association has lately held its annual meeting, and the retiring master has been keenly criticizing his fellow members, and by implication the European community generally, for not interesting themselves more wholeheartedly in the civic concerns of the most important city in Asia. The indictment which he made is admittedly a true one.

The middle-class European in Calcutta regards himself as a mere bird of passage. His main idea is to make money quickly and then retire to England or Scotland and spend it. He grudges every moment be spends in India, and takes no interest in anything except his business and sport. The result is that municipal affairs have fallen very largely into the hands of Indians, whose ideas do not always harmonize with European ideas, and the result is friction and complaints of inefficiency.

The farm work was done by the pupils in addition to maintaining an excellent standing in the work at school

During 1913 five boys from each of six different points in the state where the plan was in operation earned from farm work in connection with excellent school -standing $9,728.03,

The explanation of the large increase in the earnings of the group of 30 pupils in the year 1913 as compared with the group of 25 pupils in 1912, is that the extent of the work of the former group was nearly double that of the latter. Boys who undertook vegetable projects in the first year continued vegetable growing the second year and added other projects, such as poultry keeping, fruit growing, beekeeping and dairying. It is doubtful, in the opinion of Rufus W. Stimson, state agent in charge of agricultural education, if the group to be reported on for 1914 will be able to

In a recent pamphlet by Frederick T. Fuller, chairman of the Progressive party's committee on taxation, the effect of the escape of legally taxable property s estimated to be so great that the correction of intentional or negligent undervaluation by local assessors would alone reduce the average rate to about $8 on the thousand, instead of more than $17, as at present. This is equivalent to saying that half the property of the state, theoretically taxable, escapes direct taxation.

No new indictment of the tax system and its operation in this state needs to be brought. None could be more sweeping than that it accomplishes only half what is designed, and consequently imposes upon the half that is taxed a double burden. Even this has lost its power to startle, because of its familiarity. It little wonder that the Legislature is besieged by petitioners for change in the system, or that men who study the problem find an ample field for proposed J. J. ## "I Really Enjoy My Wife's Little Dinners, Now"

And it's all because we've got a dandy new range. Do you know-for the longest time I thought wife was losing the knack of her old-time good baking, when it was all the fault of an old worm-out range with loose bolts and open cracks that you could stick a knife into. No wonder wife had poor success with everything she put in the oven. Because we were saving the price of a new range, we thought we were economizing—all a mistake, though—our new Great Majestic is easily earning its cost in the fuel-saving alone—and such baking and reasting

You see, the Majestic is put together with rivets so that its joints and seams are practically air-tight—and they stay so. The body is lined with a thick sheet of pure asbestes board—placed behind an open grate so you can see it.

This combination is the sole secret of the wonderful improvement in my wife's baking and roasting—since we purchased a

MME. CULP RETURNS

In Jordan hall Thursday afternoon song recital and gave pleasure to a goodsized audience. She presented four groups of songs-two German groups with Schubert and Wolf as the composers, a group in English by Carpenter and four old French songs. Her accompanist was Cenrad V. Bos.

Mme. Culp in her interpretations put the emphasis more on singing the notes than on reading the words. Abstract sound, not concrete speech, was her means of conveying ideas. She was, first of all, an artist in music; secondarily, an artist in elecution. appeal was more like that of a violinist than that of the usual performer at a song recital. Her expression came chiefly from the coloring and phrasing which her voice gave to the melodies.

Necessarily, however, there was clear understanding of the text behind the singer's work. There snone on the poetry, screened though it was by the music, brilliant intellectual and emotional glow. So in the end as vital a message reached the hearers as if literary effects had been directly pressed

Pieces that were a desirable addition to the recital repertory because of their freedom from the sentimentalism of the usual American song were two by Carpenter on prose words after Rabindranath Tagore. Rid of the restrictions of versification, the composer had scope for writing a frank and flowing vocal proposed system for the distribution of line. Such work indicate improvement

State School Superintendents Meet in Boston

Lorimer Hall Gatherings Dicuss Means to Help Children Who Have to Become Earners

BOSTON IS EXAMPLE

Massachusetts school superintendents gathered in Lorimer hall, Tremont Temple, today for the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Superintendents Association. President Fairfield Whitney of Everett presided.

The topic was the compulsory continuation school regarded as the imme diate issue in Massachusetts. The speakers were chiefly Boston educators, and their remarks centered in the compulsory continuation schools which Boston is to open next autumn. These will policy, probably be the first schools of the kind. At Brookline, Somerville will have the in the state, made possible by act of Legislature only last spring. They are to be for boys and girls from 14 to 16 years of age who have gone to work.

The organization and procedure of the work to be established in Boston was presented by W. Stanwood Field, di- tals will be given by Messrs, Carvell and rector of this department of school Kramer. The chairman for the debate being made to make the schools prac-Form cards issued as working certificates are expected to reveal the aptitudes and tendencies of the child as well as the work in which he is engaged. From these will be determined the number and kinds of courses to be conducted and the proper placement in the school of each child. These certificates will also enable the school to keep the child at some constructive work in school whenever he may be out of a fob.

Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince spoke on the necessity for special training of continuation school teachers and methods of securing such training. A person who may be vell qualified to teach in the conventioral school, she said, may not be at all fitted for continuation school work unless he is given definite preparation The work of the continuation school must be concrete at all points.

The relation which the continuation school bears to the general school was pointed out by Frank V. Thompson, assis,ant superintendent of schools. The cortinuation school, he said, was definite in its aim, to fit the pupil for a particular line of work. All his instruction tesded to that one end.

COMMITTEE NOW CONSIDERS PLAN FOR REGISTRATION

Legislators Study Proposed Act Favored Both by Christian Scientists and State Board

Members of the legislative committee on public health have under consideration the proposed new medical registration act to which an amendment drawn by former Gov. John L. Bates, as counsel for the directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and agreed to by the state board of registration in medicine, has been made. Another amendment has been submitted by chiropractors to the effect that the meastire should not apply to them. This question was left in the hands of the committee at the conclusion of a hearing in the State House yesterday.

At the hearing several chiropractors told the committee that they had been unable to reach an agreement with the state board in medicine by which the, proposed act should not apply to them. They submitted an amendment to this effect to the committee, however.

Although J. S. Riley, Hugh D. Via and Frederick Atherton, Boston chiropractors. asserted that their system differed from osteopathy, and claimed that they should not be required to take a medical examination and register with a state board, Dr. Bowers told the committee that a recent court - decision had practically classed chiropractors with osteopathists, who are required to register.

Several of those present spoke in behalf of greater medical freedom, A. F. Hill of Boston asking the committee to beware of any legislation which would confer police powers on a health board. Thomas H. Bates, Wendell P. Thore and William H. Borden also spoke for medi-

CHICAGO PLANS FOR OPENING OF PANAMA CANAL

Land and Water Transportation Facilities Are Being Increased in Order to Be Ready for Rush

PROJECTS CONSIDERED

CHICAGO-The fact that Chicago is in a position to profit commercially by the opening of the Panama canal is beginning to be more generally understood throughout the city and state as the time for the use of the big new waterway approaches. The Chicago, St. Louis & Gulf Transportation Company which is ready to begin freight operation between Chicago and LaSalle on water is turned into the canal cavalry. in the spring, is starting plans to extend its service from LaSalle to St. Louis and New Orleans. The agitation to the same standard as the Hennepin Tex., to inspect battery C, third field canal from Hennepin on the Illinois is rapidly gaining favor.

The report of the federal commission recommending that the $20,000,000 of bonds authorized by the people of Illinois for waterway construction be used to improve the canal and Illinois river from Chicago to the Mississippi, at Grafton, to provide an eight-foot channel, the national government to maintain the waterway, has stimulated still further the interes' in water transportation. All of these developments have recalled the remarks made last November by John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union, about the possible benefits to Chicago of the Panama

With the expenditure of not more than $25,000,000 Chicago could be provided with a comprehensive waterway system connecting the Great lakes with the Mississippi river. This would involve the improvement of some of the existing canals and rivers.

Few persons, even in Illinois and Chicago, realize how well supplied this city to the New York. with water transportation facilities. First there is Lake Michigan. Then extending from this lake at Chicago is the drainage and ship canal, built at a cost | when commissioned. approximately $55,000,000, opened 1900, and providing a channel 22 feet deep and 158 feet wide at the bottom, and running 34 to Lockport on the Illinois river. Second there is the old Illinois and Michigan canal, built at a cost of about $9,000,000 in 1848, extending from the lake at Chicago, paralleling e drainage canal, and running to Lasalle; this is 96 miles long, with a botbuilt by the United States government the Ohio, to the New York. and completed in 1907 at a cost of Illinois river, across the northern part training station, Newport, R. I. Fourth, the United States government missioned. maintains a six-foot depth in the Illinois river from Grafton, where it empties into the Mississippi, to LaSalle, a listance of 223 miles. Fifth, the United States is improving the Mississippi river to provide a minimum depth of six feet rom St. Louis to Minneapolis and St.

The object in constructing the Hennepin canal was to provide waterway connection, between Lake Michigan and the upper Mississippi river, through the Illinois and Michigan canal. For a distance of 63 miles-from Joliet to La Salle-this anal is and for many years has been in such condition that boats of a draught of nore than four and a half feet could not use it. This is the chief reaon why the first shipment from the Mississippi river to Chicago via the two anals was not made until five years after the Hennepin canal was completed. In 1912 the Morton Salt Company of Chicago shipped a cargo of salt from the Mississippi to Chicago by water.

ois rivers, and its low water summit 33 feet above the Mississippi. Its locks are 170 feet long and 35 feet wide, and can pass barges 140 feet long and 34 feet wide, of 840 gross tonnage capacity. The I. & M. canal, in addition to being only about five feet deep through most of its ength, has locks which are but 105 by

It is estimated that the expenditure of $1,000,000 would bring the old canal . the same standard and capacity as the Hennepin, and provide a seven-foot chandirect from Chicago to the upper Mississippi river. The same figure is noted as the estimate made by the engiioners to investigate the proposed im-

MORE ALFALFA BEING PLANTED

WICHITA, Kan.-Members of the Board of Trade who have been watching the progress of planting and preparations for inoculating alfalfa fields, and members of different firms engaged in grain buying and shipping are certain that the acreage of alfalfa will break all existing records for a single year, the Eagle re-Greater demand for alfalfa seed coming from the eastern states is given as one of the contributing reasons for better faith being placed in alfalfa. Wichita and other cities in the great centers of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma have received inquiries from Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and states further east for good grades of alfalfa seed. Within a few months following last season's drought this section of the country is declared by the grain men to have leaped into prominence as an alfalfa center, although the growing of alfalfa is of comparatively recent date.

For Value Received

As a means of spreading education, of giving general information of interest to all and of bringing into our own sphere a knowledge of how the rest of the world thinks and does, the daily newspaper, not considering the cost to the reader, occupies a position of importance unattained by any other form of the printed. word.

Most men who read anything, it is often said, read the newspaper. The bigger and broader the source of information the greater will be the understanding of those who read. To produce a newspaper which can furnish news from the far corners of the world, and which is in every sense big and broad, requires far more revenue than the subscription price paid by the subscribers, who receive more than full value.

For the privilege of bringing their offerings to the attention of Monitor readers, the advertisers pay that proportion of the cost of production which, to a large degree, makes the paper possible. Thus whenever the readers of the paper patronize its advertisers, when feasible-price, quality and service being equal, they are putting their influence where it will count directly in making a better newspaper possible.

"For value received" the readers' intentional interest in advertising, and the consequent patronage of newspaper advertisers, is found to be satisfactory. It produces an increasing confidence in advertising as a prominent economic factor where care is exercised in accepting only honest advertising, as is the case of the Monitor.

Combined with the Rosenthal Method of Practical Linguistry

of Practical Linguistry
Anyone can learn a foreign language whe hears it spoken often enough; and by this method
you can hear it as often as you like.
It is the natural way to acquire a foreign language. You hear the living voice of a native Professor pronounce each word and phrase. He seeaks as you desire—slowly or quickly, night or day, for minutes or hours at a time.
It is a pleasant, fascinating study; no tediousrules or memorizing. Not expensive—all memhers of the family can use it. You simply practimes, and in a surprisingly short time you areak, read and understand a new language.
The system is arranged on both Disc and Cyl-Sceak, 'read and understand a new language.

The system is arranged on both Disc and Cylinder pronouncing records. You can now use your own talking machine, Colembia, Victor, etc., to acquire a foreign language.

Send for free "Treatise on Language Study," payments.

Arrivals, Str Ripple 26,400 pounds, schrs Helen B. Thomas 23,500, Jorgina 8000, and Mary C. Santos 15,800. The Santos also had 300 flounders, Ripple 1000 scrod, 1000 soles, and 175 halibut. Dealers price: Steak cod $8.75 per cwt, market cod $4.50, haddock $5.75, pollock $5.50, large hake $9.75, medium hake $5.75, and cusk $4.50.

Although only about half the number of vessels reached T wharf during the seven days ending Thursday night than the number that came in during the corresponding week of 1913, the amount of fish was greater. Receipts for the past week have been nearer normal than they have for several weeks owing to many vessels coming in from off shore grounds with big catches. Statistics issued today show 36 vessels at T wharf with 1,166,-185 pounds fresh fish for the past seven days, compared to 62 vessels with only 1,155,655 pounds for the same period of Receipts of fresh fish at Gloucester to day were supplied only by gill netters. Chambers of Everett is to preside, and Provincetown comes news that the school schooner Rose Dorathea is fitting for halibut fishing.

GRAIN MARKET

Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago corre-

Wheat-Somewhat steadier market. Leading bulls were among the early sellers but there was a better commission house demand, partly due to short covering and also claims of a better domestic cash demand. Favorable crop condi-96% tions still prevail over the American 96% winter wheat belt and this materially under that of a year ago. Corn-There were fractional advances early, based on short covering, and further buying by cash houses. Receipts HENDEE SALES are not heavy. Subsequently bears became more aggressive. A renewal of talk was heard relative to the bearish position of the Argentine, decreased consumption in the United States and ad-

been short covering, however, on predictions of a rather bullish farm reserve

One of the chief considerations in a bank's earning capacity is the ratio of the capital account to its aggregate deposits. It stands to reason that a bank carrying a large capital and surplus offers all the more security to its depositors. But then comes the question which affects stockholders, the return they are receivupon as the stockholders' money no less than the invested capital.

Hackney Coaches in 1635

On Jan. 19, 1635, an attempt was made to solve the problem of London trafficwhich even then was a serious one, the Daily Chronicle (London) says-by restricting the number of hackney coaches. Charles I. issued a proclamation setting out that "hackney coaches are not only a great disturbance to his Majesty, his dearest consort, the Queen, the nobility and others of place and degree in their passage through the streets, but the streets themselves are so pestered and the pavements so broken up that the common passage is thereby hindered and made dangerous; and the prices of hay, provender, etc., thereby made exceedingly dear. Wherefore we expressly command and forbid that no hackney coaches or hired carriages be used or suffered in London, Westminster, or the suburbs thereof, except they be to travel three miles out of the same. And also that no person shall go in a coach through the said streets except the owner of the coach shall constantly keep up four able horses for our service when required."

Boy Needs His Father

A prominent welfare worker recently summed up his experience and observation in the simple words: "A boy needs his father." The whole world knows that a girl needs her mother, but there seems to be some apathy on the question of a boy's constant need of his pear to realize that providing food, shelter, clothes, good schooling and noney for a boy is not a full discharge of the obligation a father owes his son. A boy needs the encouragement, the inspiration and the comradeship of a father who hasn't forgotten that he himself was once a boy.-Los Angeles Trib-

United Kingdom's Attitude on Mexico

To ANYBODY who understands the United Kingdom its political attitude with respect to the Mexican question is extremely significant. When London goes mafficking there is nothing particularly serious in the civic mind. The exuberance of the curbstone is merely the high spirits of a few students in their spare hours. When London says nothing and the headlines in the papers become more than usually contracted, it may be taken for granted that Gog and Magog have taken to thinking. Sir Edward Grev put this fact succinctly in his recent statement to the House of Commons. The quietness, he explained, with which the country had heard of the Benton affair must not be regarded as a proof of its indifference. On the contrary it must be taken as a sign that it was seriously concerned. That the country is seriously concerned there can be no doubt, and when the country is seriously concerned its memory becomes prodigious.

If General Villa and his associates imagine, therefore, that if they can weather the present storm the United Kingdom will, after a time, forget, they are making the greatest possible mistake. It will be one and the same thing in the eyes of the United Kingdom, so far as General Villa is concerned, whether General Huerta succeeds or fails. King George's government has never asked President Wilson to become responsible for the punishment of Mr. Benton's assassins, but it has quite made up its mind that if the cabinet in Washington does not, when the opportunity offers, undertake their punishment itself, that punishment will not be less condign because its infliction is reserved for Downing street. There is not the slightest inclination in any single quarter to blame the United States in any way for General Villa's morals, but there is a distinct feeling that the policy of the President has enabled General Villa to give expression to those morals in a particular act which is punishable in a particular way.

From the very beginning of the struggle, the United Kingdom has trusted the Washington government without reservation. It had naturally no wish to intervene in any way in the struggle. Some centuries' experience of bush fighting and guerrilla warfare have not produced in British ministries an inordinate desire to take an unnecessary hand in such matters. The interests of the country in Mexico are, however, very considerable, and if the United States demands that other nations shall promulgate a self-denying ordinance, that demand carries with it the moral obligation to see that their interests and subjects do not suffer for their compliance with the quite natural demand of the President in this respect.

The British Government does not wish even to hurry the government in Washington in working out a particularly difficult problem. What, however, they are quite failing to understand, is how the problem is to be worked out by giving the culprit the assistance necessary for him to maintain the position he has taken up. The President of the United States made a particularly plain declaration of policy with respect to the fate of Senor Madero. What the precise moral difference in the fate of Madero and the fate of Benton may be, people are being driven to calculate in terms of political expediency.

Kansas City Proves Its River Claim

WHEN all the facts are taken into consideration it will be found, we believe, that Kansas City greatly underestimates the total of the dividends its merchants and shippers and people in general have already drawn from their investment of $1,200,000 in the "Usethe-River" enterprise. This amount the enterprising people of Kansas City raised to forward the project of restoring the Missouri river to navigation when they found it next to impossible to move Congress to take such action as would induce private capital to interest itself in the reestablishment of a steamboat line. They saw the force of the argument, "Use the river as it is before seeking to have it improved." And they acted upon this injunction. No sooner had they determined upon doing for themselves what they had been vainly striving to have the government do than the government began to cooperate with them. In 1909 Congress appropriated $1,000,000 for Missouri river improvement; in 1910 another appropriation of $600,000 was made for this purpose, and this was followed in 1911 by still another appropriation of $625,000. There are excellent prospects of a much larger allowance than Congress has yet made toward the construction of a deeper channel between Kansas City and the South, and as soon as this is assured the present boat equipment of the city will be greatly enlarged.

There have been unquestionably great gains for Kansas City in the renewed impetus which the enterprise has given to the community's energies and in the advertisement it has given its merchants abroad. Correspondence of the Monitor places the saving to shippers consequent upon the establishment of the steamboat service at $100,000. But this constitutes only a fraction of the gain. Before the "Use-the-River" movement culminated in the restoration of water navigation, Kansas City was compelled to accept any tariff on shipments the railroads might deem it proper or expedient to impose. Since the inauguration of the steamboat service, the merchants of Kansas City have had a choice of routes for a large part of their shipments. They have been enabled by the use of even their small fleet of steamboats if not actually to dictate terms to the railroads, at least to reason with them and to the great advantage of Kansas City's trade.

In other words, even very small employment of the Missouri river thus far has given Kansas City wholesome competition in transportation. This is what waterway development might do for all communities that may in any wise be affected by it. It ought not to be questioned at this late day that the community which enjoys a choice of means for the routing of its receipts and shipments also enjoys a decided advantage over the community that is subject to any form of transportation domination or monopoly. The great thing Kansas City's little river fleet has done for that community may be summed up in the statement that it has given freer movement to its commerce.

WHEN interest and discussion concerning the high cost of living were at their height, a large number of communities in the United States undertook to solve the problem by establishing municipal markets. Los Angeles, a city well advanced in all progressive municipal enterprises, was among the earliest of these. The underlying idea, as our readers may recall, was to afford an opportunity to the producer and the consumer to meet on common ground, thus eliminating the middle man and doing away with a large number of intermediate charges which, while constituting a burden for the consumer, contributed little or nothing to the producer. It was predicted in reactionary circles at the time that when the municipal markets had lost their novelty they would also lose their usefulness. The time has arrived when reports should be received from localities that ventured upon this new form of civic activity and these should show whether interest in and patronage of the municipal markets have been maintained. At all events, a report from the superintendent of the Los Angeles markets for the last six months is at hand, and this is of a nature calculated to disappoint

Some of the facts in the report are exceedingly interesting. For example, during the period covered the number of venders in the various Los Angeles markets under municipal control was 13,439. In this time 11,000 tons of foodstuffs were sold, the estimated value being $150,000. More than half the pedlers were producers or their representatives. Between 20,000 and 25,000 patrons representing, perhaps 150,000 consumers, visited the markets. When the expense of market operation was deducted from the receipts, in the nature of rentals, fees, etc., there was found a balance in favor of the city of $21.76.

This is small no doubt, but it nevertheless marks favorably the difference between a deficit and a surplus. It proves the markets to have been self-supporting. This is a fact that will impress and encourage many other communities, whether or not they have entered upon municipal market enterprises themselves. The experience of Los Angeles opens greater possibilities in public undertakings than may be seen in the mere size of the items in this report.

Bay State Republicans Are Hoping for Return

THERE has never been in American political history a situation quite like that of the present in party standing, hope and calculations. Probably the nearest to a counterpart was supplied when the Whig party, in a sudden disintegration resulting from long trifling with a great issue, was replaced by the Republican after a passing period of Democratic control of the government secured by the division of its opponents. The Whig party, however, had hardly time to call upon the men who were deserting it to return before it was apparent that it was useless. There was no halting in the decline, no moment of seeming return of strength, no indication that the party of Webster and Clay had an unperformed task that it must do and no other could. The Republican contention now is that it was broken in two by a protest suddenly made in a single election, largely the result of the leadership of one of the master politicians of history; that it is the custodian of principles that are not discarded by the men who went out and that are still essential; and that the return of the voters who were disaffected is to be only less swift than their departure. Stray evidences supplied by special elections to Congress and local tests support the claim that it is a party with a future.

The mood of the Republican party is one of ardent invitation. Such gatherings as the dinner given to the retiring chairman of the Republican state committee in Boston unfailingly display the confidence that the plea for the return of the wanderer will avail. There is less confident proposal of a meeting of the leaders of the two wings with a view to reunion. The refused invitation cannot be often repeated without humiliation. But if not the leaders, then the rank and file, let the leaders stay where they will. This other note is getting louder, that there must be avowal of progressive intentions, a readiness to yield to the particular wishes of the men who protested the stiff conservatism of the old party. Along with it comes the confident claim that the restoration is not long to be

The topic cannot be dropped without the observation that threeparty division has never been long tolerated in American politics. Its product is minority control. The maneuvers of party managers are not likely for long to hold the people from that alignment which will make a government representative of their larger number. The assurance of that political law has its value in spurring active politicians to give the liveliest evidence that theirs is the rallying point of a real majority. Formal invitation will not be needed when that fact is made obvious by conduct and candidates.

How

Educators

Four years ago the city of Pittsburgh received from an anonymous donor a fund of $250,000 the income of which was to be used by teachers selected from the public schools for vocational betterment, preferably in travel. The privilege of release from duty for a season of travel to another region at home or abroad, and of study in schools of pedagogy or in colleges and universities, has now been granted to 322 teachers, and another group goes forth this coming summer. By this endowment the teacher of the public schools gets much of what professors in the colleges and universities enjoy during their sabbatical years. Horizons are widened. Insights into new bodies of truth and new details of teaching technique are won. Consequently when teaching is resumed pupils and masters both know that a more competent instructor is at work. The few exceptions only prove the rule. Such personal expansion and gain in the art of teaching must be the usual result of a care-free, full-pursed jaunt of a Pittsburgh teacher to the summer schools of Columbia and Harvard Universities, to Chautauqua summer assemblies, and to schools of pedagogy, kindergartening, and the applied arts.

In progressive, up-to-date and well-to-do communities the sabbatical year already exists for high school teachers. But it seems as necessary for the primary and grade teachers; indeed more so, some would contend. But pending acceptance of this system by a town or city, individuals, duplicating the generosity of the Pittsburgh donor, can do much through special endowment to make the summer vacation season a time of fine growth as well as of rest.

PRESIDENT WILSON, in presenting the specially designed gold medal of the National Los Angeles Geographic Society to Colonel Goethals, with Municipal his customary felicity of statement adequately summed up obvious aspects of the Markets canal builder's career and of the record of the United States in projecting, constructing Successful and fortifying the new waterway. It is true, as he said, a great man has had a chance to do a great thing in a great way for a great end. The "mere gold" of the medal is insignificant save as it symbolizes "the most precious metal we know, namely, the gratitude and the admiration of the world." As a splendid testimony of what can be done by cooperative action among engineers knowing no professional rivalry, the gigantic task supervised by Colonel Goethals becomes, in the opinion of President Wilson, an irrefutable answer to those who distrust governmental enterprise and responsibility in constructing public works. A great government has been served in a spirit of self-effacement by leaders of a great constructive profession, engineering, a calling which often has among its rewards the delight of seeing ends achieved, the face of nature transformed, and humanity's activities broadened.

Not the least noteworthy of the President's dicta scattered through his discriminating eulogy of the canal builder was his division of nations into two classes, the static and the dynamic, and his inclusion of the United States among the latter. The least friendly of oversea powers will hardly dispute President Wilson's declaration that the United States "is not one of the statical nations of the world." It does disturb equilibriums, and it does "cut new paths for the thought and action of mankind," and this more frequently today than formerly in the field of international politics. 'States," Bacon said, "as great engines, move slowly." But the point is that if alive they move, and forward and upward if really

On occasion, of course, there is retardation and seeming decline, only to be followed by restoration of power and prestige. The world has several conspicuous illustrations of this process now before its eyes. But for the United States there never has been subjugation by a foreign power, reduction of national resources, or serious challenge of its will by its rivals. This freedom naturally begets assurance, vigor of policy and a pioneering spirit. Unchecked it has its ultimate disadvantages, as President George Washington foresaw and warned against in his farewell address.

A BILL making it possible for the city of Buffalo to pass under the commission form has been put through the Assembly at Albany by the remarkable vote of 107 to 3. Buffalo has long sought a new charter; it will soon have an opportunity of deciding for itself whether it really desires to go the whole length in municipal reorganization.

COMMERCIAL associations, boards of trade, civic societies, the Bankers Association, several of the states of the American Union and, finally, the United States government, have of late been encouraging in various ways those boys and girls in different parts of the country who, through club association, have accomplished many remarkable things in tillage. The achievements of corn, canning, gardening, poultry and other clubs,

Educate the Young Farmers

North and South, as recorded in the newspapers, have received general public attention. It has been demonstrated repeatedly that where the interest of the young people has been aroused and maintained, in part at least, by prospects of reward either in profit-sharing or in prizes, soil capacity has been greatly increased through more thorough cultivation. In some instances the crops have been Appreciative recognition of the work performed by these young farm workers has taken the form of free excursions to many points, frequently to the national capital. Last summer there were several large excursions of boy and girl agricultural prize winners to Washington. Great pains were taken to make these visits enjoyable. The President, members of his cabinet, prominent officials and public men generally, as well as the ladies of their households, displayed interest in the visitors and sent them away greatly pleased with their experience. But there has been considerable doubt as to whether such trips yield the most desirable results, and the agricultural department, as if giving expression to it, now recommends that instead of ordinary prizes or excursions, the boys and girls entitled to reward be given an opportunity to improve themselves in the agricultural colleges. Thus it is proposed that each prize winner be granted a year's free tuition in a college if qualified for entrance, in an elementary school if not so qualified.

It is impossible at present to estimate the number of boys and girls in the United States who, in 1914, under ordinary conditions, would be entitled to prizes. It is not impossible, however, to conceive that the potential value of each of them to the nation would be very great. The fact that they have earned prizes in farm work should be accepted as qualifying them, as well as entitling them, to higher instruction. In these prize winners, whether there be 1000 or 10,000, the nation has the nucleus of an industrial army of incalculable value. There will be ready approval, we think, for any reasonable expenditure, private, state or federal, that may be undertaken with the view of teaching the young people, that in turn they may teach others, how to improve and increase the fruits of the soil.

IT WOULD be well for the state of New York and for the United States and Dominion governments to bear in mind that the 1,000,000 tourists who visit Niagara Falls annually do not stop off there because they are interested in the mills.

A WORLDWIDE penny postage system, such as Sir John Henniker predicts will be universal soon, would mean so far as the United States is concerned, an extension of its present 2-cent rate with some countries to all countries.

Another practical result of Minnesota's country home revival is to be seen in the report that it has 11,000,000 chickens in stock outside of the cold storage warehouses and in advance of the spring

WHETHER it is the first crow, the first bluebird, the first robin or the shedding of the commuter's overshoes that heralds the approach of spring will probably always be a very nice question.
